Dear Mr. Schwind:

As you know, I am the President and a Founding Partner of Disaster Preparedness Resources, Inc. (DPR, Inc.), a private firm that specializes in medical and public health contingency planning and management solutions. As the former Senior Medical Planner of the Department of Defense, I seek opportunities to bring complex emergency and disaster preparedness initiatives and resources to the broader venue of our Nation's public in hopes of enhancing their ability to prepare, respond and recover from calamitous events.

I recently had a chance to be re-introduced to your most ingenious product – the Global Safety First Read Mask – and wanted to take this opportunity to comment on how vastly important I think a resource like this can be.

Each of us faces a wide panoply of threats these days, and it is difficult to find any environment that is completely free of risk. Whether it may be a sudden entrapment in a building fire, a terrorist attack on our subways, or the looming risk of a super-virulent strain of influenza such as H1N1 “Swine Flu”, the immediate availability of personal protection is of paramount concern to even the most average of citizens. However, up till now, having access to personal protective resources has been hampered by the size, cost and general availability of effective resources to the general public. Your company has solved that dilemma by creating a product that can offer an enormous amount of protection to anyone immediately, and at a modicum of cost.

I have had the chance to review the test results data on the Global Safety First Read Masks, and the results are remarkable by any standard. Your product has demonstrated complete efficacy under a broad spectrum of threat environments. I see virtually unlimited utility for this product in the biological, radioactive, and high explosive scenarios the Homeland Security Council has described as the most likely catastrophic casualty events we will face in this “Era of Asymmetrical Threats.”

I see the Read Mask being of tremendous value to the safety and protection of our society at every level, from commuters making their daily rides to work; first responders looking to have instant access to enhanced personal protection; and state, Federal government and private sector employees seeking an enhanced level of surety regarding their safety in their place of work.

The potential for this product's success for disasters, emergencies and emergency preparedness, in my opinion, is quite simply enormous. Disaster Preparedness Resources, Inc. believes so strongly in this product that we are recommending that our clients stockpile two masks per person, per day for the anticipated duration of an emergency.

Please accept my most enthusiastic endorsement of the Global Safety First Readi Mask. As an experienced emergency planner, you have my word that I will wholeheartedly recommend this product to our clients and customers they serve. And, as personal testimony to how important I think this is to each and every citizen in this country, you can rest assured that each one of my family members carry the Global Safety First Readi Mask.

Sincerely,
